This website is designed for those who are interested in my background. I am currently seeking for an internship and I want to promote my skills to potential employers. I chose dark blue, green and white in my design because they are relatively formal. I also divided my experience into sections to make it clear enough to read.

I used PHP in the "contact me" section. In the contact form, I included variable, array, conditional clause, loop and self-defined function and different types of input. People who are interested in my background can contact me and I will receive an email of their input after they submit the form. In this way, I can get in touch with them as soon as possible. I also used regular expression to check users' input (e.g. phone number) in case they submit incorrect information. In addition, if users miss one or more questions, a message will be returned and point out which part(s) they missed.

WOW elements: Styling of the website is particularly impressive; Use of regular expressions; Extensive use of PHP; A well written, strong, convincing design rationale.
